The new Noval, "Love and Ambition," by the author of "Rockingham." The announcement of a new work of fiction by the suthor of "Rockingham." Will be gratefully welcomed by every reader of that delightful Novel. The descriptive force and truth, the varied incident, the remarkable vigor of narrative, the pure and gunerous form of sentiment, and the terre, idiomatic at time, which we strakingly character ad that take, which were prepared the public to expect much feasing the entire production of the gilted author. A perman of the wolmers will abundantly satisfy the anticipations justly excited by the earlier production of the rame pen. In "Love and ambition" we find all the characteristic qualities which formerly charmed in "Rockinghum," tegether with the elements of interest which, to many readers, will perhaps be yet more attractive. "With a rare inculty of expression, obtained by dallying with every form of phrase that can be constructed out of the English vocabulery, and a beautiful freedom of spirit that makes thin not ashamed to unfold the eighths of his better nature, Mr. It Marvel has opened a new vein of gold in the literature of his country."

"It clears the bead, warms the heart, revivides the soul. A sweet delirium excites the senses and makes one imagine himself in other spheres. One is young again. One 10 ye, greeve and feels answ. It penetrates the system and pervades every sense."

"The first dip into the pages has been like bathing the heart in the dooding memories of other days. The book is worth more than its weight in gold, for the heart language which breathes and glows to the end—no wonder that some have doubted the Bancelorism of the author. Be the real truth as it may, the history of the heart was never so faithfully written."

found in English literature since the days of Mackenga."

[Arthur's Home Ganette.

"It is certainly one of the finest productions of the literary genius of this country and will be universally read with pleasure and admiration."

"If some parts of this book is not poetry—real prety—equal to anything statched to ythin, we have yet to learn what real poetry.

"Quotations give but a faint idea of the depth of feeling, the beautiful and winning frankness, the elastic vigor of the soul and the singular fidelity of expression which characterizes this remarkable volume. Its quaint ingenuity of arrangement is wholly lost in extracts, and in order to senjor the delicious adaptation of four to sentiment in which it would be hard to mane its equal, it must be read as as a consummate artistic genities whole.

"All the critics praise whole."

AMUSEMENTS.

TO PROF. SATTLER, THE PAINTBER OF THE COSMORAMA CORNER BROADWAY AND THIRTEENTH ST—Dear Sir. Your Cosmoranic Views afford the means of much information and even to those who have visited the spots, they bring back earniful recollections. Of the twenty-six scenes now on view, I can speak from personal observation of about orelast, including Jerussiem, Constantinopie, Alexandria, the Pyramids, the Colossal Ttatues of Memnon, the Crater of Mount Vesuvius, St. Mark's Piace in Venice, Market Piace in Brussels, etc. These views approach more nearly to the originals, as enshrined in memory, than anything I have ever seen. The execution, and especially the management of the light is masterly. So far as my indigment can be worth anything, no person should fell to visit your rooms.
